Claims 12-31 are pending in this application.

This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

- (1) fungicide with copper and polylysine, non-crosslinked;
- (2) fungicide with copper and polylysine, crosslinked;
- (3) fungicide with copper and polylysine, copolymeric or cooligomeric with additional monomers (specific monomer required).

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. If species (3) is elected, applicant must further specify the exact copolymer or oligomer. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a). Currently, all claims are generic to the above noted species.

Art Unit: 1616

The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons.

The only supposed common feature between the species is that the fungicide has copper and polylysine of some sort but this is not a proper corresponding special technical feature because the polylysine is so derivatized in species (2) and (3) that it is no longer the same substance as species (1).

Under lack of unity rules, unity of invention exists only when there is a technical relationship among the claimed inventions involving one or more of the same or corresponding special technical features. The expression “special technical features” is defined as meaning those technical features that define a contribution which each of the inventions, considered as a whole, makes over the prior art. The “contribution over the prior art” is considered with respect to novelty and inventive step.

Here, polylysine is already a known fungicidal agent for plants. Charter et al. (US 20020001582) explicitly disclose the use of non-crosslinked polylysine for fungicidal use in plants and seeds – see claim 6 for example. Therefore, the corresponding feature in the different species fails to define a contribution over the prior art because it would have been obvious to combine a known fungicide, non-crosslinked polylysine, for plants and seeds with another known fungicide for plants and seeds, copper salts. Consequently, there is no technical relationship among the claimed inventions involving one or more of the same or corresponding special technical features.
